

deal with distress. They operate with perfect ease and safety, causing no gripping or any other painful or distressing effects. They are not the cause of any alimentary canal thoroughness, cleansing the canal of all putrid, irritating and fecal matters.

Pills as a general thing, however, do not increase it. This habit of the body more obdurate. The more pills are taken the more it is confirmed. The reason for this is obvious. The pills are not the cause of the obstruction they produce upon the membrane of the alimentary canal, and from this arise the uncomfortable effects. They are composed of materials congealed to the canal, and in proper proportion to carry out the principle of the operation. If they do not, and cannot, they remove the cause of the obstruction, and the canal closes to increase it. They operate too harshly, overstrain, and prostrating the vital energies of the system, and thus increase the obstruction.

It is a fearful excitement that follows this condition of the system. The reaction that follows this condition is a fearful excitement of the entire range of the alimentary canal, and the nerves throughout the whole system. This denigrates at once to a great degree the secretions of the interior fluids, and in this manner the constipation of the bowels is increased, rather than relieved. A vast number of persons, who are taken down after doses of various kinds of pills know that they are being, remaining long out, however.

Every family who are in the habit of keeping medicines for their own convenience, should never do without these pills. After having once tried them and ascertained their good qualities, they would not do without them. Persons also who are in the habit of traveling much, and are often liable to be unwell, would also find them convenient to keep on hand.— Their operation is so easy and yet efficient, so easily dispensed with, without any inconvenience whatever, that they ought to form one of the indispensable items for the traveler's outfit.

Try them and know for yourself whether

PAIN IN THE SIDE
This distressing symptom of Consumption arises from inflammation of the Lungs, of the Membrane called the Pleura, or from bronchial affection of the lungs themselves. In either case it is a very dangerous indication of disease. If patients neglect free breathing, and weary away the natural strength of the system, they are almost certain to die.
